Who It Is For

-  People who need quick hot water for tea
-  Those who prefer glass kettles for visibility
-  Users looking for auto shut-off safety
-  Home users with limited counter space
-  Individuals who want LED boiling indicators
-  People who need boil-dry protection

Who It Is Not For

-  Users who prefer stainless steel kettles
-  Those who need high wattage for large volumes
-  People who want a compact, lightweight kettle
-  Individuals who prefer no LED indicators
-  Users who need a built-in water filter
-  Those who require a cordless design

Trade Offs to Consider

---

-  Glass is more fragile than stainless steel
-  LED indicators may drain battery over time
-  Requires careful cleaning to avoid stains
-  Not ideal for boiling large volumes quickly
-  Less durable than microwave-safe plastic
-  Cannot be used for brewing coffee directly

Users Say
